WiFi Access Policy

Helen Kate Furness Free Library provides free WiFi internet access.

Because it is a public network, your data could be vulnerable during transit on the network, and persons running simple software on a wireless laptop computer either within, or within a few hundred feet of, the Library could intercept the data. As such, we recommend that you do not use this network for the transfer of sensitive data, such as credit card numbers or bank account numbers, even while using SSL encryption built into your web browser.

Helen Kate Furness Free Library and the Delaware County Library System assume no responsibility, nor accept any liability, for the safety of equipment or for laptop configurations, security, privacy, or data files when connecting to the Library's network. They also assume no liability associated with the viewing of, use of, or exposure to any information, pictures, or illustrations that you may encounter while using the Library's wireless network.

The Library staff is not able to provide technical assistance and no guarantee is provided that you will be able to make a wireless connection.

By using the Library's wireless network, you affirm that you have read this policy and you agree to accept the risks and limitations discussed above. You further agree to comply with all state and federal laws and Helen Kate Furness Free Library policies and procedures while using the wireless network, including those regarding obscenity, pornography, or delivery to minors of materials deemed harmful to them.
